

Sassy, quirky, retro, whatever, the eat-in kitchen has personality. Update may be eligible for current NC rehab tax credits which will expire at the end of the year.

The kitchen opens to the back corner screened porch which is a great gathering space today and offers options for future expansion tomorrow..

A nice place to start and finish the day.

More nice sight lines looking toward the two back porches.

The sitting area at the end of the upstairs hall is another get-away with practical built-in shelves.

Another nice get-a-way, the upstairs screened porch.

The back bedroom has windows on three sides

Additional shelves are located at the back of the upstairs hall just outside the upstairs full bath. NC rehab tax credits may also be available for updating existing baths and adding baths within the existing footprint of the house.
