

The Historic Oakwood neighborhood is an eclectic urban village seamlessly surrounded by unique urban neighbors pictured below. The value of property in Oakwood is increased by its status as a local Historic District, the first in NC.

Marsh Woodwinds frequently have jazz concerts upstairs.

Walking through the adjacent Oakwood Cemetery is walking back through history. The rolling field just inside the gate is the site of picnics and winter-time sledding.

The NC Governor's Mansion is across the street from Historic Oakwood.

The Oakwood Common a block away is a play area for toddlers and the site of the annual spring jazz brunch, 4th of July picnic and hot cider during the Candlelight Tour in December. Canines can play at the nearby Oakwood Dog Park.

Live, work and play in the Blount Street Commons that includes historic and new homes, commercial spaces and parks on land formerly owned by the State.

The PieBird restaurant just opened, owned by two Oakwood neighbors.

Blount Street Commons includes the new HQ for the state architects' association (NC AIA) now under construction.

Grab lunch and a vanilla coke at the Pharmacy in a building dating back to 1910.

Walk across N Person St to the Burning Coal Theater located in the Blount Street Commons. It was the auditorium for the old Murphey School now adaptively renovated as senior citizen apartments.

Nicole's Art Gallery is across Person Street from the PieBird and Pharmacy.

Walk a couple blocks to Peace College, a women's institution dating back to before the Civil War. Walk one block further to the Shops at Seaboard Station that includes Logan's nursery, a hardware store, a pet shop and Seaboard 18 Restaurant.

NOTE

This page is a work in progress intended to illustrate the extraordinarily rich urban assets seamlessly surrounding Historic Oakwood. Check back for periodic updates.

Peter Rumsey 4/15/2011

Walk to work at the nearby state government offices shown here across the street from Peace College and towering over the steel skeleton of the new AIA HQ. Catch a bus to NC State or the R-LINE circulator service in and around the downtown.